THE SONG OF SEVENTY.

BY MARTIN LAFORGE TUTTER.

I am not old—I cannot be old,
Though three score years and ten
Have wasted away, like a tale that is told,
The lives of other men.

I am not old; though friends and foes
Alike have gone to their graves,
And left me alone to my joys and my woes,
As a rock in the midst of the waves.

I am not old; though friends and foes
Alike have gone to their graves,
And left me alone to my joys and my woes,
As a rock in the midst of the waves.

I am not old; though friends and foes
Alike have gone to their graves,
And left me alone to my joys and my woes,
As a rock in the midst of the waves.

I am not old; though friends and foes
Alike have gone to their graves,
And left me alone to my joys and my woes,
As a rock in the midst of the waves.

I am not old; though friends and foes
Alike have gone to their graves,
And left me alone to my joys and my woes,
As a rock in the midst of the waves.

I am not old; though friends and foes
Alike have gone to their graves,
And left me alone to my joys and my woes,
As a rock in the midst of the waves.

I am not old; though friends and foes
Alike have gone to their graves,
And left me alone to my joys and my woes,
As a rock in the midst of the waves.

I am not old; though friends and foes
Alike have gone to their graves,
And left me alone to my joys and my woes,
As a rock in the midst of the waves.
